1. OVERVIEW

In face of the changing positions of Hong Kong, mainland China and Asia in the new century, we believe that a quality research institute needs to be in place to foster critical thinking and broaden the horizons of a future generation of leaders.

The Hong Kong Institute for the Humanities and Social Sciences was set up in 2001 with a mission to promote innovative, cross-disciplinary scholarship. It believes that a broad humanist education is essential to the construction of a modern civil society. Hosted by The University of Hong Kong, the Institute is not under any faculty and maintains a unique balance of institutional affiliation and autonomy in leadership, management, program focus and impact.

The Institute is firmly rooted in Hong Kong but highlights broader perspectives on China, Asia and the world, with three principal goals:

- It encourages participants to challenge established mindsets, question taken-for-granted categories and explore creative solutions.

- It organizes field-oriented and team-based research programs to instill a sense of intellectual bonding, social commitment and civic purpose.

- It strategically generates opportunities for sharing knowledge with a concerned public.
Since its establishment, the Institute has created a modest but critical community of thinkers and practitioners in the Asian region. Some are researchers, and others will become professionals in the government, public organizations and the business sector. The Institute’s investment in human software will multiply as people’s careers mature. Hopefully, they will exert a profound influence on education, community development, the economy and policy for the Asian region.

This report presents a summary of the Institute’s core programs in the academic year of 2008-2009. It also includes a master plan of development for the next five years in view of institutional changes following the incorporation of the Centre of Asian Studies. Based on its enhanced capacities, the Institute embarks on new and ambitious programs, with the long term goal to develop into an institute of advanced regional studies in Asia.

2. A MILESTONE YEAR

The academic year of 2008-2009 has marked a new page in the development of the Institute. In the past, the Institute has focused primarily on research training in Chinese studies. Since 2006, it has established an expanded intellectual agenda involving partners not only from China, Europe and North America, but also South and Southeast Asia, and the Middle East. Professor Helen Siu, Honorary Director of the Institute, presented the new agenda to colleagues and institutional partners. Responses were extremely encouraging. In 2008, the Institute’s Executive Committee endorsed a five-year program with a theme of “World Engagements: China and Hong Kong in an Interconnected Asia”. This broadening direction is accelerated in 2009 with the recruitment of a new in-house research team, the setting up of long term global partnerships, and the implementation of the Institute’s Inter-Asia research training programs.

2.1 DEVELOPMENT OF IN-HOUSE RESEARCH TALENTS

It is the Institute’s objective to nurture young scholars in the humanities and social sciences by providing a vigorous research environment. Developing in-house talents is also a way to network with colleagues in other faculties and departments. In 2007, the University generously allocated three Research Assistant Professor (RAP) positions for three years to the Institute. From an extraordinarily large and international applicant pool, we recruited one RAP in 2008 and two in 2009.

Nanlai Cao

Dr. Nanlai Cao holds a Bachelor degree in Sociology from Peking University (1998), an M.A. in Sociology from Fordham University (2000) and a Ph.D. in Anthropology from the Australian National University (2008). His research interests include the anthropology of contemporary China, religion, Christian charity, and transnational merchant communities.

He has maintained an excellent research profile before and after joining the Institute:

- In November 2008, he presented a paper at the Conference on “Indigenous Charities: Historical Studies of Charity Institutions Across Culture”, organized in Hong Kong by the Institute and the History Department of the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

- In March 2009, he attended the annual meeting of the Association for Asian Studies, and accompanied the Honorary Director to consult with the Institute’s advisors – Professors Paul Cohen (Harvard University), Prasenjit Duara (National University of Singapore), William Kelly (Yale University), Susan Naquin (Princeton University), Kalyanakrishnan Sivaramakrishnan (Yale University), Wang Gungwu (National University of Singapore) and James Watson (Harvard University).

- In July 2009, he presented a research paper in Taipei entitled “East by Southeast: Multiple Perspectives on Asia.” The conference was co-organized by the American Anthropological Association and Academia Sinica of Taiwan with over 400 participants.

His book manuscript “Constructing China’s Jerusalem: Christians, Power and Place in a Post-Mao City” received a contract from Stanford University Press for publication in 2010.

His paper entitled “Raising the Quality of Belief: Suzhi and the Production of an Elite Protestantism” has recently been accepted for publication by the French academic journal China Perspectives.

In November, he was awarded the prize for best dissertation in 2008 by the Asian Studies Association of Australia.

Since his arrival, he has engaged with two of the Institute’s research training groups, namely, “Indigenous Charities in the Modern World” and “Collecting Chinese Art in Hong Kong: A Global Phenomenon”.

Charles Wheeler

Dr. Charles Wheeler (Ph.D. 2001 Yale University) joined the Institute in August 2009. He is a specialist in the history of China, Vietnam and the South China Sea. He recently completed a book manuscript on trans-oceanic networks of commerce, culture and colonization in Vietnam from the 16th to the 19th centuries.

Before joining the Institute, Dr. Wheeler had taught Chinese and Southeast Asian history at the University of California, Irvine for seven years. Since his arrival, he has focused on the following research activities:

- He submitted an application in August 2009 for a Seed Fund at the University to support his current research entitled “Missions, Markets, Colonies, and Regions at Sea: The Buddhist Expansion of Maritime China”. He has submitted an application for a more substantial General Research Fund under the Research Grant Council in October 2009.

- He is assigned to help develop the Institute’s research cluster “Trading Empires of the South China Coast, South Asia and the Gulf Region”. He will join the cluster’s planning meeting at Yale University in December 2009 where he will meet participants from Cornell, Columbia, Yale, and University of Washington, and elsewhere.
• He will present his recent research at a conference in Beijing entitled “Of Ships and Man: International Conference on new Comparative Approaches in Asian Maritime History and Archaeology” to be held in November 2009. He will take the opportunity to network on behalf of the Institute with colleagues at Ecole française d’Extrême Orient, Centre national de la recherche scientifique, the Institute of Archaeology of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, and the Chinese National Centre for Underwater Archaeology.

Matthew Mosca

Dr. Matthew Mosca (Ph.D. 2008 Harvard University) is a historian specialized in Qing China frontier relations, with a focus on British imperial activities in India preceding the Opium War. His broad knowledge of frontier geographies extends from coastal China to India and the Middle East. His expertise on ethnicity, trade and inter-regional politics fits comfortably in the Institute’s inter-Asia agenda.

Prior to joining the Institute in September 2009, Dr. Mosca was a post-doctoral fellow at the Center for Chinese Studies of the University of California, Berkeley.

• Since his arrival, he has submitted an application for Small Project Funding which is an internal grant for the University’s new staff. The project title is “Qing China’s Perspectives on India, 1700-1860”, essentially an extension of his doctoral research.

• He organized a panel for the Annual Meeting of the Association for Asian Studies, to be held in March 2010 in Philadelphia, the United States. The panel was accepted after a highly competitive exercise, and his presentation is entitled “Reconfiguring Sovereignty: The Significance of the Qianlong-Jiaqing Transition in Qing History”.

• He is the coordinator of the Institute’s lunchtime series on “Interdisciplinary China Studies’ (see below for details).

• His paper entitled “Empire and the Circulation of Frontier Intelligence: Qing Conceptions of the Ottomans” has been accepted by the Harvard Journal of Asiatic Studies for publication in June 2010.
He is in conversation with an international university press to publish his doctoral dissertation entitled “Qing China’s Perspectives on India, 1700-1860”.

Through the generosity of the University, the Institute begins to develop an in-house research team. The team’s expertise and areas of interest are complementary, and its members share a passion to adding substance and energy to the Institute’s programs. The collective efforts will reinforce the Institute’s intellectual push into the inter-Asian region, and enhance its public profile in Hong Kong and overseas.

The Institute also endeavors to generate momentum to reach colleagues at the University and its global partners. The Institute initiated the appointment of Professor Deborah Davis of the Sociology Department at Yale University as Visiting Research Professor for a semester. She has chosen to visit the Institute three times in the coming year. In October, she worked with our in-house researchers to introduce a lunchtime series on interdisciplinary China studies. Held on alternate Tuesdays, the workshops are casual gatherings in which senior and junior faculty members can share their views on critical issues in China studies. The first presentation was made by Professor Davis on divorces in urban China. More than 20 colleagues filled the Institute’s small seminar room. The second presentation made by Professor Kam Louie (Dean of Faculty of Arts) on ‘Rethinking Confucius’ attracted an equally focused audience. Future sessions are being arranged, and speakers will include the Institute’s research staff and colleagues from various departments of the University.

2.2 GLOBAL PARTNERSHIPS AND OUTREACH

In the early years, the Institute focused on setting up institutional partnerships in China to capture the eastward movement of the center of gravity in Asian studies from North America and Europe. Today, while the world is casting its spotlight on China, the Institute steers its China and Hong Kong colleagues to engage with a dynamic, interconnected Asia. In 2008-2009, the Institute not only strengthened its existing connections, but also negotiated with several internationally well-placed academic institutions for new exciting collaborations.

Social Science Research Council

The Social Science Research Council (SSRC), one of the world’s largest funding agencies in area studies, launched a new “Inter-Asian Connections” initiative in 2007. The scheme revisits regional studies by highlighting Asia’s historical and contemporary connections. In February 2008, Professor Helen Siu and Dr. Jascha Yu, Associate Director (Research) attended a conference organized by SSRC in Dubai. They presented the Institute’s own progress in this direction, and met with program directors of SSRC and other participating institutions from South Asia, Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Europe and North America. A proposal was drafted and discussed in 2009 to link the Institute with SSRC and the National University of Singapore (NUS). The participants have committed to a three year budget and a program that involves training workshops, site visits, conferences and publications. Activities will be hosted in Hong Kong, Singapore, and the United States. The group plans to hold a final conference to give an overall summation and announce a future direction as part of the centenary celebration of The University of Hong Kong in 2011.

Representatives of the three partners signed a letter of intent in October 2009 to formally endorse the program. Organizers have scheduled a planning meeting with invited colleagues on November 18-19, 2009. The Inter-Asia Initiative at Yale University is hosting the event. See Appendix 1 for the meeting agenda and list of participants.
Since its establishment in 2001, the Institute’s staff have attended every annual meeting of the Association for Asian Studies (AAS), the world’s leading professional society in Asian studies. To highlight the Institute’s research agenda, we encourage Principal Investigators to present their work at International meetings. Dr. Anne Rademacher, Principal Investigator for “Environmental Sustainability, Political Ecology and Civil Society”, submitted an application to compete for a roundtable session at the 2010 AAS Annual Meeting in Philadelphia. The session entitled “The Political and Social Ecology of the City in India” has been accepted and will be held on March 28, 2010.

The Institute has committed a modest allocation of funds to support two panelists from Asia to participate in the conference. They are Dr. Janaki Nair (Jawaharlal Nehru University, India) and Dr. Awadhendra Sharan (Centre for the Study of Developing Societies, India). This hopefully will be the beginning of a partnership with AAS to bring more Asian scholars to the Association’s programs, an effort very much appreciated by the AAS. See Appendix 2 for the session abstract and names of panelists.

Pending feedback on the upcoming roundtable session, the Institute might compete for a panel in the 2011 AAS Annual Meeting in Hawaii for the research cluster “Trading Empires of the South China Coast, South Asia and the Gulf Region”. By joining hands with world-renowned academic platforms, the Institute will make its intellectual agenda visible to an international scholarly community.

Harvard-Yenching Institute

Harvard-Yenching Institute (HYI) has a long and distinguished history of supporting research in Asia in the humanities and social sciences. Its present director, Professor Elizabeth Perry, is a senior political scientist at Harvard University, and a founding Executive Committee Member of the Hong Kong Institute. In 2008 and 2009, the Institute’s staff members met with HYI and colleagues in China to set up three research training programs:

Grassroots Society and Popular Culture

This is an advanced workshop for postgraduates to be held in January 2010 in Shanghai. The Institute worked with Professor Elizabeth Perry and Professor Yu Jianrong of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences to deliver the program. Dr. Yan Xiaojun from the Department of Politics and Public Administration at The University of Hong Kong will take part, and Professor Helen Siu has accepted the invitation to lead a seminar on theory and method.

Urban Studies and the China Experience

This is an advanced summer workshop for postgraduates jointly organized by the Institute, HYI, New York University and East China Normal University. The workshop will be held in June 2010 in Shanghai. It plans to take 40 junior scholars and postgraduates from Hong Kong, Mainland China, Taiwan and the United States with an open competition. The trainees will attend an intensive 10-day lecture series, tutorials and guided fieldwork. Leading scholars from the three partner institutions will join guest lecturers to speak on topics related to theoretical and empirical studies of urban development in China and its global relevance. HYI will offer extra fellowships for outstanding participants to pursue further research training under the guidance of selected academic mentors overseas. See Appendix 3 for the original program proposal in Chinese.

Over-quantification in Research Assessment of Humanities

Professors Helen Siu, Prasenjit Duara and Elizabeth Perry have been in conversation since early 2009 to review existing standards and methodologies for assessing research output. Colleagues have argued that the needs of humanities and social science studies have not been fully appreciated when funding is operated under the present science and laboratory-based models. Through a series of seminars with senior scholars and academic administrators, this program aims to highlight alternative perspectives in weighing humanities and social sciences research and in measuring deliverables. Hopefully the exercise will set a new assessment standard with local and worldwide relevance.

Yale University

The Institute has considered Yale University a vital partner since the former was established in 2001. It has worked closely with the Council on East Asian Studies at the Whitney and Betty Macmillan Center for International and Area Studies. Senior colleagues involved with the Institute’s activities include Professors William Kelly (Anthropology), Peter Perdue (History), Deborah Davis (Sociology), and James Scott (Political Science). To keep pace with its expanded intellectual agenda, the Institute has started to organize new research clusters with senior colleagues in two of the other area councils, Professors K. Sivaramakrishnan (Anthropology and Chair of the South Asian Council), and Marcia Inhorn (Anthropology, International Public Health, and Chair of the Middle Eastern Council).

Council on East Asian Studies

Recent joint activities included the following.

- A two part workshop on “Olympics and Asian Sports”. The team held its first workshop with a public presentation/dinner in Hong Kong in March, 2008, a few months before Beijing Olympics. The team comprised scholars from the United States, Europe, China, Japan, Taiwan, and Hong Kong. It was greeted with great enthusiasm from the academic, business and policy communities. A follow-up workshop was held at Yale in October 2008 to review the issues soon after the Beijing Olympics. An edited volume is being prepared by two leading anthropologists, William Kelly of Yale University and Susan Brownell of the University of Missouri.

The Council on East Asian Studies secured a three year research training grant from the Sun Hung Kai Properties-Kwoks’ Foundation Limited in 2005. The Council has partnered with the Institute to manage two sub-projects – “Shanxi Historical Relics: Training for Recording and Preservation”, and “Comparative Urban Development in the Pearl and Yangzi River Deltas”. More than ten academic institutions from Hong Kong, Mainland China and the United States took part in a variety of field-oriented programs. The 200 participants are largely postgraduates and young professionals. They have produced over ten academic papers and books. A selected list of trainees and titles can be found in Appendices 4 and 5.

The Kwoks’ Foundation has recently approved a no-cost extension for the Council to use the unspent funds to complete the training programs.

Inter-Asia Initiative at Yale

The Macmillan Center has provided a two year seed grant to set up the initiative, headed by Professors Siu, Kelly and Sivaramakrishnan. The funds are used to host planning workshops at Yale University and to support graduate students and faculty attending the Institute’s activities in Asia. Emily Ip, the chief administrator of the Institute, visited the Macmillan Center in October 2008 to discuss with Yale administrators on the Institute’s role in the Initiative. The initiative has hosted / will host the following activities in 2009:

- A planning meeting for the research training cluster “Environmental Sustainability, Political Ecology and Civil Society” (January 2009);
- A planning meeting among SSRC, NUS and the Institute on a 3-year research training program of “Inter-Asian Connections” (November 2009);

- A planning meeting for the research training cluster “Trading Empires of the South China Coast, South Asia and the Gulf Region” (December 2009).

- Professor Marcia Inhorn, Chair of the Council on Middle Eastern Studies, will co-organize an international conference on “Global Flows in Global Health: Inter-Asian Connections” with the Institute and the United Arab Emirates University in January 2010. Please see “Multi-year research training cluster” section below for details.

- The Institute works closely with Professor K. Sivaramakrishnan and Dr. Anne Rademacher to finalize the program of a workshop on urban environmentalism in Asia’s mega-cities. The event, consisting of two days of public seminars focusing on New Delhi and Mumbai, and a site visit in Hong Kong, will be held at The University of Hong Kong on March 12-14, 2010. It brings colleagues and practitioners from around the region, and expects vigorous dialogues between South Asian and China scholars.

Max Planck Institute

Professor Helen Siu and Dr. Jascha Yu were invited to Göttingen, Germany, to attend a conference in August 2009 organized by the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Religious and Ethnic Diversity, an established research institute in Europe. In addition to presenting the Institute’s latest research on urban development in South China, they met with the Director of the Max Planck Institute, Professor Peter van der Veer and his colleagues. The Max Planck Institute showed great interest in the Hong Kong Institute’s inter-Asia agenda and programs, and further meetings are being set up to identify areas of possible collaboration.
One sees exciting development in the numerous ties the Institute is forging with overseas institutions. The Institute is increasingly viewed by overseas colleagues as a potential partner in Asia for the promotion of medium and long-term research training in the humanities and social sciences. It is partly due to the repositioning of Asia in the recent decade. Moreover, The University of Hong Kong and the Institute, being supported by private and public funds, with transparent professional procedures and an environment which respects open and civil exchanges, are considered realistic partners.

2.3 CORE PROGRAMS 2008-2009

The Institute has been systematic in its efforts to use research and outreach programs to promote its visions. It constructs a visible platform with coordinated lectures and seminars throughout the year in Hong Kong and China, advanced summer workshops, multi-year research clusters, commissioned projects in partnership with local community, and bilingual publications. In addition to existing comparative regional studies on China, the Institute launched its Inter-Asia programs in 2008-2009. The activities connect colleagues, institutions, and sites across the globe. Major progress is summarized as follows:

China and Hong Kong in an Interconnected Asia

The program comprises six research teams. Each team is led by one or two globally situated senior scholars, with co-investigators from local and overseas academic institutions. Based on funding allocation for three to four years, they conduct joint research and site visits, and maintain regular dialogues. The research clusters encourage young scholars to discover interdisciplinary and inter-regional topics, and to build unconventional platforms for their future careers.

- Trading Empires of the South China Coast, South Asia and the Gulf Region

Program Themes

The Mediterranean, the Indian Ocean and the South China Sea have been linked by intercultural trade and regional ports for centuries. Rejuvenated cross-border businesses in Guangxi, Yunnan, Burma and Vietnam in recent decades have intensified cultural exchange and political volatility. These historically global processes in the region need comprehensive analytical frameworks. The team will explore cultural change associated with trade and imperial empires, diasporic communities, religious traditions and colonial encounters over the last 15 centuries.

Activities

The team met for the first time in July 2008 to finalize the research proposal for consideration by the Institute’s Executive Committee. A workshop for an expanded team is scheduled in December 2009 at Yale University (see Appendix 6 for the list of participants). The workshop will define distinctive historical moments, sites, social groups, and institutions to map out a maritime regional space, and to examine the dynamic interconnections that have been neglected by land-based, state-centered analytical frameworks. These themes will be used to structure the subsequent three year program of activities.

- Environmental Sustainability, Political Ecology and Civil Society

Program Themes

The issues of sustainable development are being increasingly refocused, from preservation of natural environments to resource distribution in Asia’s congested mega-cities. These processes – resource entitlements and property rights, citizenship and migration, rapid social polarization and the future relation of cities to changing hinterlands – need innovative analytic scrutiny. Governance performance and legal disputes may be key analytical lenses to understand these interrelated processes.
Activities

A planning meeting was held at Yale University in January 2009 where team members from the United States, Canada and India discussed the major issues to be examined in the next three years. The findings of the team will be captured in a workshop on “Urban Ecologies in Asia” scheduled for March 12-14, 2010 at The University of Hong Kong. It will investigate urbanism, nature and ecological sustainability in Asian cities, with a focus on New Delhi and Mumbai. Professor George Lin, HKU Department of Geography and Dr. Sarah Liao, Senior Advisor to Vice-Chancellor of the University, will be discussants. The Institute will also invite scholars, practitioners and policy makers from China and Hong Kong to share and compare experiences. A visit to Civic Exchange will follow where the group will meet Christine Loh, a leading environmental activist, and other non-government environmental groups in Hong Kong and China. Please see Appendix 7 for a tentative conference program and list of participants.

In the meantime, the team has organized a panel of papers and discussions at the Association for Asian Studies 2010 annual meeting to be held in Philadelphia, the United States, on March 28, 2010. Please see section on AAS above for details.

• Global Cities and the Social Life of Finance Capital in Asia

Program Themes

The flow of international capital has changed people’s world-views and life-styles. World cities are reaching outwards to compete, collaborate and survive in a much transformed global order. Topics for research training include the historical flow of finance capital between China, India, the Middle East and Europe; Hong Kong as an art-collecting hub and its impact on the international art market; the repositioning of the middle class in these volatile global cities; cosmopolitan imaginings in Shanghai’s urban planning; economic life and work ethics of city youth today; and the experiences of Chinese family businesses as the powerhouse for China’s global economic expansion. There are 4 sub-projects with interrelated themes.

Financial Integration History between China and the World

Led by Professor Chen Zhiwu of the Yale School of Management, the team has started collecting data in July 2008 in Taiwan, on national interest rates and relevant historical records. Similar studies will be carried out in Hong Kong in December 2009.

Everyday Life in Global Shanghai: The Economic Life and Work Ethics of Shanghai Youth Today

The principal investigators, Professor Wang Xiaoming (Shanghai University) have recruited research assistants and commenced fieldwork and interviews.

Shanghai: Global City Aspirations and the Transformation of the Everyday

Professor Jiang Jin (East China Normal University) led a group of students and colleagues to organize a city walk program in Shanghai to compare the city’s historical and latest development in culture, industry, finance, and science and technology. An international conference on the history of Shanghai is also being planned for June 2010. Please see Appendix 8 for a call for papers with details on the conference themes (in Chinese).

Collecting Chinese Art in Hong Kong: A Global Phenomenon

The Institute’s research team has worked closely with Professor Jenny So (The Chinese University of Hong Kong), principal investigator of the program, to develop a research proposal on the global impact, in cultural and institutional terms, of several distinguished art collectors in Hong Kong. Dr. Tang Lingyun, assistant professor of Sociology, The University of Hong Kong has joined the project as a co-investigator. In October 2009, the team submitted an application for a General Research Grant under the Research Grant Council.

- Colonial Medicine, Science and Contemporary Public Health

Program Themes

This project takes a comparative approach to colonial medicine and its implications for medical culture in contemporary society. It has three parts. First, it analyzes policies and moralities regarding disease and epidemic control in the very different historical contexts of China, Taiwan and Hong Kong. Second, it examines regional flows of people, goods and diseases, and how post-colonial institutions and emerging economies can proactively devise ways to prevent serious health risks. Third, it will explore how experimental medical sciences and practices in China and the Middle East deeply affect gender, social relationships, and new moral debates.

Activities

Professor Angela Leung, one of the three principal investigators of the cluster, convened a workshop on “Medical Culture in 19th and 20th Century Chinese East Asia: Comparative Colonial Medicine and Beyond” on June 13 and 14, 2009 in Hong Kong. After the conference, the research team met with the Institute’s staff to confirm plans for the coming two years. For organizing a major conference in future, and possibly a substantial joint funding proposal, Leung and the Institute’s staff are engaged in serious discussions with active members of the Centre for Humanities and Medicine, newly established in The University of Hong Kong. Interested colleagues include Professor Paul Tam (Pro-Vice-Chancellor of Research),
A second major activity of the cluster, an international conference on “Global Flows in Global Health: Inter-Asian Connections”, will be held in United Arab Emirates from January 4 to 8, 2010. It involves over forty-five speakers and discussants from across the globe. Contemporary health issues such as AIDS, tobacco and narcotics, infectious diseases (including swine flu and avian flu) and mental health are examined with cross-reference to different world regions. The Institute has invited Professor Lam Tai Hing (The University of Hong Kong School of Public Health), Dr. Yoon Sung-won (Department of Community Medicine), and Professor Sian Griffiths (The Chinese University of Hong Kong School of Public Health and Primary Care) to share experiences on Hong Kong as a global city. The other Principal Investigators of the research cluster, Professor Angela Leung (The Chinese University of Hong Kong) and Dr. Priscilla Song (Washington University) are also invited to attend.

- South Seas and Western Territory, Past and Present – A Digital Database Project

Program Themes

The project aims to demonstrate the diversity of Chinese material culture and to develop a sustainable and publicly accessible digital database. Its activities will train curators to select, record and visualize subjects for heritage preservation. It hopes to establish new research questions in Asian history, art and culture, and provide unexplored materials for teaching and curriculum development.

Activities

Professor Liu Zhiwei, Principal Investigator of the cluster and Executive Vice-Dean, School of Asia-Pacific Studies, Sun Yat-sen University, works with the Institute to support a Master’s program in cultural heritage to train postgraduates and museum curators. The team has also held discussions with museums in the Guangdong region concerning the feasibility of building a joint database on material cultural relics.
In August 2009, the Institute commissioned Tan Jinhua of Wuyi University to study selected watchtowers in Kaiping, Guangdong which are key features of a World Heritage Site. In the past few months, Tan and her assistants have taken preliminary surveys and photographs of over 100 villages and watchtowers. They have also interviewed old emigrants to understand the history of watchtowers and village life in the prewar and postwar periods. The team will complete a more intensive study by summer 2010 and produce a report of the preserved wall paintings. The images and other materials acquired from fieldwork will form an important part of our heritage database designed for public access.

- Indigenous Charities in the Modern World

  Program Themes

  Much can be learned about communal organization by studying indigenous charities. Chinese communal leaders have historically been involved in the provision of charitable services, beginning with medical and funeral services and education. Closely connected with these activities are the self-perceptions of the leadership, the perpetuation of its ideals and the acceptance of its institutional role by the community it serves. Not least, the corporate holding of communal property and the need to raise funds raise questions of accountability. These issues will be of interest to scholars and practitioners alike.

  Activities

  A Conference on “Indigenous Charities: Historical Studies of Charity Institutions Across Culture” was held on November 6 and 7, 2008 at the Chinese University of Hong Kong to inaugurate the project. Sixteen scholars including colleagues from the University of Hong Kong presented their preliminary views on indigenous charities in different cultures. Keynote address was given by Professor Murat Çizakça (Professor of Economics and Economic History, Bahcesehir University, Istanbul) on “Charity in the World of Islam: Waqfs, Origins, Evolution and the Future”. The Chinese experience was also explored in comparison with that of their counterparts in Southeast Asia, the Middle East and Europe.

Participants expressed great interest in expanding the conference agenda into a research program. Professor Rajeswary Brown has subsequently prepared a proposal, and formed a team with eleven core members. In August 2009, the budget for the cluster was approved and the team will meet in late November 2009 to discuss core issues to be examined. Please see Appendix 9 for a list of invitees. There are also active plans to submit the proposal to major international funding bodies such as the Ford Foundation, the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, and Rajaratnam Institute of Strategic Studies (in Singapore) for additional support.

Comparative Regional Studies of China, Historical and Contemporary

The Institute continues to deepen its on-going research training programs on “Comparative Regional Studies of China”. Those focusing on northwest and southwest regions are covering historical studies (historical preservation, lineage formations, religious and rituals in the making of local communities). The ones centering on coastal cities, the Yangzi and Pearl River deltas stress contemporary, social science issues (urbanization, migrant health, and modern public sphere).

Distinguished Lecture Series

In partnership with the University of Hong Kong Faculty of Arts and Faculty of Social Sciences, the Institute launched a new public lecture series on the campus in 2008. The inaugural lecture, entitled “Reclaiming the Chinese Revolution”, was delivered by Professor Elizabeth Perry of Harvard University in November 2008. Over two hundred attended.

The second lecture “Revisiting the Idea of Asia in Our Times” given by Professor Prasenjit Duara, Director of Research, Humanities and Social Sciences at National University of Singapore, was also well-attended. Professor James Scott (Yale University) will speak on January 13, 2010 on ‘Introducing “Zomia”: Site of the Last Great Enclosure Movement of (relatively) State-less Peoples in Mountainous Southeast Asia’. Other speakers in 2010 include Professor Deborah Davis (Yale University) and Professor Frank Dikotter (The University of Hong Kong / University of London).

Advanced summer workshops 2008 and 2009

As in previous years, the advanced summer workshops in 2008 and 2009 were over-subscribed. Trainees from Hong Kong, China, Japan, the United States and the United Kingdom took part in the two-week lectures cum fieldwork in Zhangzhou, Fujian Province (2008) and Yichun, Jiangxi Province (2009). Originally, in view of similar workshops increasingly organized by other institutions, the Institute and its partners at Sun Yat-sen University were to consider our involvement in the workshop series complete. However, they were so impressed by the quality and enthusiasm of a new generation of trainees that they are considering the series’ continuation in future.

Please see Appendices 10 and 11 for enrolment statistics and programs of the two workshops.

International Conference “The Olympics in East Asia: Nationalism, Regionalism, and Globalism on the Center Stage of World Sports”

The conference was co-organized by the Institute and the Council on East Asian Studies of Yale University in March 2008 at the University of Hong Kong. The program included a welcoming dinner and a two-day conference. The dinner with over 120 guests attending was an inspiring gathering for scholars, government officials, community and business leaders. Professor Paul Tam (Pro-Vice-Chancellor of Research, The University of Hong Kong) initiated the two-day academic conference on campus. Professor Kam Louie (Dean of Faculty of Arts) joined as a discussant, and around 30 colleagues and students attended the event. A follow-up workshop was held at Yale University in October 2008. Please see section
Premiere of Documentary “Young and Restless in China”

Following successful screenings of “China in the Red” by New York-based film producer Sue Williams in 2005 (in Hong Kong) and 2006 (in Guangzhou), the Institute presented the Asian premiere of her latest documentary Young and Restless in China. Director Williams followed nine young adults from across the country for four years, giving an in-depth look of a generation with unbound ambitions as well as ambivalence, energized, and in fast forward mode.

Three screenings were organized in Hong Kong, Beijing and Shanghai in November 2008, with a diverse range of co-sponsors – the Asia Society in Hong Kong, Tsinghua University in Beijing, and East China Normal University in Shanghai. Tickets for the Hong Kong showing were sold out within days. Two hundred guests shared the film and an inspiring dialogue with Sue Williams and Professor Lung Ying-tai, acclaimed Chinese cultural critic and former Cultural Minister of Taipei. Responses from the Beijing and Shanghai screenings were equally enthusiastic, with attendance numbering over two hundred. The Institute is convinced that quality programs can be shared and appreciated by diverse audiences.
As an extension of the Beijing premiere, Director Williams met with students from the Peking University-Yale University Joint Undergraduate Program to share her experience on filming documentaries in China.

Bilingual Publications

History in the Field (歷史田野叢書)

This is a joint series with the Sun Yat-sen University as co-editor and Joint Publishing (Beijing) as publisher, on humanities and social sciences subjects in historical China. Nine titles have been published since 2005, most of the 5,000 copies printed for each title were sold out in two years. Many of the authors are young scholars who took part in the Institute’s activities, and it is the Institute’s goal to publish their works as part of the research training.

Titles of the series published in 2008-2009 are as follows:

- 黃海妍: 《在城市與鄉村之間:清代以來廣州合族祠研究》 (2008)
- 溫春來: 《從“異域”到“舊疆”:宋至清代貴州西北部地區的制度、開發與認同》 (2008)
- 鄭銳達: 《移民、戶籍與宗族:清代至民國期間江西贛州府地區研究》 (2009)
- 鄭振滿: 《鄉族與國家:多元視野中的閩台傳統社會》(2009)
In response to the positive feedback from the first series, the Institute is in the process of working with the Sun Yat-sen University and Joint Publishing on a second series with a goal of publishing fifteen titles in the next three years. Please see Appendix 12 for a tentative list of titles.

Understanding China: New Viewpoints on History and Culture

Professors Helen Siu and David Faure are editors of this series. Each book provides a short and accessible guide to the research highlights of an active field of Chinese studies. Some authors were speakers of the Institute’s lecture series, who wrote on the same subjects to deepen understanding beyond the lectures. Three titles have been published since 2006:

- David Faure (Chinese University of Hong Kong), China and Capitalism, A History of Business Enterprise in Modern China (2006)
- Frank Dikötter (The University of Hong Kong / University of London), The Age of Openness: China before Mao (2008)
Others are expected to go to press:

3. GOVERNANCE AND ADMINISTRATION

As a research unit at HKU, the management structure of the Institute is unique. It is not under any faculty or teaching department, and reports directly to the Vice-Chancellor and the Pro-Vice-Chancellor of Research. Its mission and direction is charted by an Executive Committee which comprises senior academics and professionals in Hong Kong, China and overseas. The Executive Committee meets at least twice a year to endorse program proposals and discuss major issues affecting the development of the Institute. Current membership of the Executive Committee is at Appendix 13.

An advisory board whose members are drawn from various disciplines and institutions across the globe offers another valuable layer of experience and exposure. Current membership of the advisory board is at Appendix 14.

Since July 1, 2009, the Centre of Asian Studies, a long-standing research centre at The University of Hong Kong, has been incorporated into the Institute. The Institute’s leadership is working on a restructuring plan with the University senior management.

As a transitional arrangement, Professor Helen Siu continues to serve as the honorary director of the enhanced unit. Professor Siu-lun Wong, former Director of the Centre of Asian Studies, serves as the Executive Director of the Institute. Over the summer of 2009, Professor Siu met with research and administrative staff to discuss vital issues related to restructuring, governance, and new research training programs. Please see Appendix 15 for background information on the Centre of Asian Studies.

A search committee was set up in August 2009 to select a new full-time director for the Institute. At the rank of full professor / chair professor, the new director is expected to be a distinguished senior scholar with expertise in the humanities and social sciences disciplines. He/ She should build on the existing strengths of the Institute, infuse it with his/ her vision and forge collaborative and synergistic links within and beyond the University. The Institute’s leadership believes that in the long run, the reorganization will enable the Institute to accelerate its clearly defined programs, and to work towards an institute of advanced studies in the humanities and social sciences in Asia.

4. FUNDING AND FINANCE

The Institute is funded from several sources. The University has provided seed funding and government matching grants, and donations are sought from private and charitable foundations in Hong Kong and abroad. This enables the Institute to engage academics and public-minded individual and groups, who together maintain broad intellectual visions and pursue socially meaningful goals.

A brief summary of the expenditure and income of the Institute in 2008-2009 is as follows:

* does not include the costs of three central-funded Research Assistant Professor positions, granted in September 2008, August 2009 and September 2009 respectively for 3 years.

The first grant from the University Development Fund expired in 2008. In 2009, in recognition of the Institute’s contribution to the University’s research development, the University committed an additional annual budget of HK$3 million for five years, starting from July 1, 2009. This budget will cover all of the Institute’s staff and administrative cost, and release the Institute’s funds from private donation for program building and outreach activities. When opportunities arise, the Institute will submit proposals to government funding agencies (such as the University Grants Committee and the Research Grants Council), family foundations. and charitable organizations. These are efforts to engage public support in the Institute’s development.

A major supporter of the Institute is the Hong Kong Foundation for the Humanities and Social Sciences (the Foundation). Established in 2005, the Foundation is a charitable organization registered in Hong Kong to support higher education in the humanities and social sciences, with a focus on interdisciplinary research training and social commitment. The Foundation has designated the Institute as its primary beneficiary, and it intends to develop an endowment fund for the Institute’s long-term planning and operations.

A Board of Trustees comprising independent and respected members of the public oversees the operations of the Foundation and implements an investment plan to ensure stable growth of its funds. The Institute’s honorary director and a member of its executive committee report annually to the Trustees of the Foundation, and present funding requests when necessary.

In consultation with the University leadership and the Institute’s donors, the Institute’s Executive Committee oversees the Institute’s funds and approves its budgets. The day-to-day financial activities are monitored by the Finance and Enterprises Office at the University of Hong Kong. The accounting of income and expenditures closely follows university guidelines and regulations.

5. LOOKING FORWARD: AN INSTITUTE FOR ADVANCED STUDY IN ASIA

For the past eight years, the Institute has succeeded in building and leveraging crucial partnerships to put its research training programs into operation. While the Institute will deepen its commitment to research training in the China field, it will also extend research training into an inter-Asian regional context, hoping to broaden its critical reinterpretation of analytic paradigms in the humanities, social sciences and policy studies.

For the coming five years, the Institute wishes to steer its partners to intellectual ventures highlighting inter-Asia connections. As described in the earlier sections the programs will follow three major routes — the Silk Road in China’s northwest and Islamic Central Asia; the historic southwest route via Guangxi, Yunnan, and Tibet into South Asia; and maritime routes through Southeast Asia, the Indian Ocean, the Gulf region and Islamic Africa.

The Institute has started with modest funding and staffing. Over the years, the University leadership, colleagues, students and donors have each contributed greatly to sharpen its mission and develop its programs. On looking back, one can probably say that the Institute has been strategic in providing creative intellectual directions, and in breaking new grounds for inter-disciplinary and inter-institutional research training. Responses from colleagues and students around the world who participated in the Institute’s activities are overwhelmingly positive. We now have a solid foundation to move forward. The incorporation of the Centre of Asian Studies can be an opportune moment to enhance the Institute’s research and administrative momentum. With quality human software and institutional infrastructure, strategic leadership, patience and time, the Institute will be able to develop into a unique advanced institute for regional studies in Asia.

Title
The Political and Social Ecology of the City in India (South Asia)

Organizer/Chair
Anne Rademacher (New York University), K. Sivaramakrishnan (Yale University)

Abstract

In this roundtable we hope to initiate a discussion between scholars of environmental questions and urban experience in India. The rapid transformation of urban India stretches the resilience of cities and the ecological integrity of the urban form. Building on a long tradition of political ecology research in South Asia, this roundtable seeks to outline an urban ecology research agenda for India. As mega-cities take new shape in India and other parts of Asia, they leave an unprecedented ecological imprint on the countryside around them and on those who live in them. If the ecology of the city is frayed and fragmented by urban sprawl and incessant redevelopment, the urban environment is strained by pollution, resource scarcity, and public health hazards. Yet, the city is increasingly home to rising aspiration and conflict among disparate groups that imagine their futures in this unstable urban ecology. Participants in this roundtable will explore how natural resource claims are forged, appealed, and mediated in urban contexts. Such claims – be they to ‘open space,’ water, or land – are deeply relevant to urban life, and may resonate in particular ways with questions of citizenship, civility, informality, and equity. These claims may also engage and challenge conventional realms of urban expertise, such as urban planning, architecture, hazardous waste management, and public health engineering. Such historically shaped moments of encounter and contest, we propose, are central to understanding nature and environmental sustainability in the Indian city.

暑期國際博士生研修班
2010年6月15-25日

主辦:
華東師範大學上海史研究中心
香港大學人文社會研究所
哈佛燕京學社
紐約大學國際高級研究中心

一、宗旨與概要

目前“都市研究”已經成為國際學術界最具活力的知識與思想生產領域之一；2008年國際金融危機爆發以來，中國30多年來的高速發展以及同樣迅速的城鎮化進程等形成的“中國經驗”正成為國際社會普遍關注的重要問題，也成為國際學術界關注的熱點。在此背景下，如何有效將“都市研究”與“中國經驗”的問題意識結合起來，可能成為中國都市研究能否取得較大發展的重要因素。尤其是在年輕一代學者身上，能否形成理論思考與經驗研究之間的有效對話，更是關係到這一領域的學術前途。為此，我們計劃共同舉辦“都市研究與中國經驗”暑期國際博士生研修班，為這兩個領域的對話提供一個開放的平臺，藉此促進各國、各地區中國都市研究學者之間的交流與合作，特別是在全球範圍內呈現出的發現、培養和凝聚一批年輕的研究人才做準備。

此次研修班的組織由華東師範大學思勉人文高等研究院上海史研究中心承辦。華東師大思勉高研院已成功舉辦國際冷戰史博士生研修班、當代中國史博士生研修班等多種研修班，在國內外學界產生了良好影響和積累了豐富經驗；同時中心將為研修班配備專門導師（負責研修班的課程設計和總體學術指導）和帶班教師（負責為學員提供在滬學習、生活所需各方面幫助），能夠確保研修班的順利舉辦。華東師範大學上海史研究中心與香港大學人文社會研究所具有密切的合作關係，兩單位合作的“世界城市研究計劃”正在積極進行中，雙方有良好的合作基礎，研修班的舉辦將進一步提升兩單位的合作水準和層次，有利於促進雙方在中國都市研究等領域的深入合作。研修班學員將從全球招生，依據申請者提交論文的質量及其研究課題學術價值等方面，由專家進行篩選，具體安排見後。

在課程形式方面，本研修班設計有專題演講、核心課程、史料解析和經典導讀等四種形式，我們將邀請與本研修班主旨相關的國際國內一流學者（簡介附後）擔任各講主講人，使學員既能集中學習前沿理論，又能在老師指導下鑽研經典、解析史料，進而懂得如何將理論與史料的搜集和研讀結合起來。另外，每場報告或講授之後，將預留時間給學員與教師交流，同時在晚上舉行學員論文報告討論會，舉辦方將聘請專家學者進行點評，並與學員一起討論。研修班期間，我們還安排聘請專家帶隊，組織學員和部分外地教授進行城市行走，通過一系列專門設計的路線對上海進行實地考察，將課堂講授與實際觀看觀想結合起來，具體感受上海、理解上海，提升學員將理論與實踐相結合的能力。

“上海：國際化大都市的想像與日常生活的更張”
Shanghai: The Global City Aspirations and the Transformation of the Everyday 國際學術研討會

2010年6月18-22日 中國·上海

主辦：
華東師範大學中國現代思想文化研究所
香港大學香港人文社會研究所
華東師範大學上海史研究中心

一、會議宗旨

1990年代以來，上海的發展成為全球化過程中的一個奇跡，在中斷了近半個世紀之後，再度崛起，成為快速發展的中國經濟的龍頭，全球資本、物質、文化、人員流動的中心之一。進入新世紀以來，上海努力提高自己在全球市場上的競爭力，欲將自己打造成21世紀世界金融、經貿中心和國際大都會。上海將自己融入全球化的金融、物質、文化流的努力改變著這個城市的日常生活模式，使城市迅速走完後革命、後冷戰的過渡時期，衝向一個未知的全球化的時代。

在此宏觀背景下，我們關注的重點是這個城市的微觀世界，也即處於世紀之交、中國經濟工業化轉型、全球化洪流中的上海在地居民日常生活的轉型。我們所關心的問題不僅包括在地居民的生活方式，也包括他們的身份認同、道德觀、價值觀—也即他們的意義和想像的世界。從空間的地理結構來說，我們希望將上海這一都市微觀世界放在中國地圖和世界地圖的交接點上，注意長江三角洲和亞洲這兩個區域概念在上海世界城市定位中的意義；從時間上來說，我們希望將當下的上海置於殖民時代和革命時代兩重歷史層積之上，關注上海在當下以世界城市為目標的自我更張過程中是如何處理國家，民族，以及帶有傳統均貧富思想的社會主義理想這些問題的。

二、會議內容

會議內容是開放性的，我們誠摯地歡迎任何與會議主題有關的原創性研究。與會者可以著重考慮下述政治經濟、社會、文化三個方面的大致框架，但不一定受其束縛。

在政治經濟脈絡中，擬以上海的房地產開發為切入點和個案來考察權力和資本在上海政治經濟生活中的運作，和這個城市的各個群體在這個過程中的利益升降沉浮與他們的因應感受，以及這個城市的物理空間和社會空間在這個過程中的展開和重構，並與殖民時代和革命時代上海的發展做縱向比較。希望通過這
樣的考察來揭示上海奇迹的內在經濟動力和政治張力，探討上海奇迹的政治經濟特徵以及以上海爲代表的城市化模式的利弊優劣，預估在全球化日益加速的背景下上海未來的走向和可能面臨的挑戰。並希望與香港、孟買、迪拜做一些相應的比較來討論全球化時代世界性大都市發展面臨的一些共同的政治經濟課題。

在社會層面上，擬重點關注城市下層的“動遷”及有關問題。在以土地和空間的經濟利益爲主要目標的城市開發中，政府以級差地租原則來安排空間秩序，將城市下層強制性安排到城郊，以此帶動城市開發，而“動遷”也爲低端或無能力消費者參加城市空間資源分配提供了一種“生活機會”。以浦東三林鎮爲案例，我們研究城市貧困層如何面臨和把握這一機會在城市邊緣地帶重建他們的工作、生活、社區、他們的“地方感”及身份認同又發生了甚麼變化，“動遷”過程又是如何改變了市民與國家的關係等問題。在此基礎上，與香港及亞洲其他城市作相關的比較分析，從而探討城市開發與城市下層居民生活重建的複雜關係，並進而分析國家在經營城市空間、介入市民生活的過程中重造城市下層的機制。
