

Kikuchi Seiichi is Professor of Southeast Asian archeology at Showa Women's University in Japan. A specialist in Vietnamese archeology, he has been researching the history of exchange between Japan and Vietnam during the early modern age for many years. He has published a number of articles about ceramics trade, especially about the trade in Chinese and Japanese Hizen wares in the Hoi An. He also writes about the archaeology of sea trade and has published extensively about history and archaeology in Hoi An.